

The second phase, dated back to 4500 yrBP to 4000 yrBP by the pottery which is also generally considered as the dates by the radiocarbon, the cluster of the pit dwellings of the north seems to have been moved to the Yosukeone area beyond the swamp in-between.

And also the cluster of the south seems to have been spread to the east. The number of the pit dwellings peaked in this time, it counts over 30.

And shortly after the move, the social facilities explained by Mr. Miyasaka had emerged in the south cluster. And the end of the Middle Jomon, people had left these two villages.

Summarising it, two clusters of the pit dwellings had exist from the first, then the people of both clusters made circular shaped settlement. And the north cluster had been moved to the Yosukeone area beyond the swamp and the south cluster had been spread to the east area of Togariishi around 4500yrBP.
